APPLE PIE ORDER

"Hello," Petunia's neighbor lady called out, over the back fence one morning. "How's your house cleaning coming along?"

"Well," Petunia replied, smoothing her apron, "the first thing I want to do is to roll up my living room carpet and store it in the garage. I'm waiting for Porky now."

"How nice of him, to help you," the lady exclaimed.

Petunia chuckled. "He doesn't know anything about helping me yet. All he knows is that I've baked a pie! Porky loves pie almost as much as he dislikes work, but I'll manage to get him to help me!"

The lady laughed. "I'm sure you will!"

Just then, Porky hurried up the driveway, breathlessly calling to Petunia.

"I came as soon as you called," he panted. "Where's the pie and what kind is it?"

"It's apple and it's still baking," Petunia smiled, taking his arm. "Why don't you come in and rest until it's done?"

Petunia winked slyly at her neighbor, as she led Porky into the house.

Porky headed straight for his favorite big chair in the living room.

"Just a minute, Porky," Petunia called out, as he was about to sit down. "Wouldn't that chair look better on the other side of the room? What do you think?"

"I dunno," Porky shrugged. "Looks fine to me right where it is!"

He started to sit down again.

"But I do want you to be perfectly comfortable," Petunia insisted, "and the light is better over here. Let's try it, anyway, shall we?"

"Okay," Porky sighed reluctantly. "Where do you want it?"

Petunia tapped her foot thoughtfully.

"Let me see? Over here, I think," she answered, as she moved to the far end of the living room.

Porky pushed the big chair across the length of the room.

"How's that?" he panted, as he sank into the comfortable chair.

Petunia was thoughtful again.

"The table that goes with the big chair should be brought over... also the little chair and the lamp, too!" she said.

"But," Porky protested, "that leaves that end of the room empty!"

"Oh, I'll think of something to go there," Petunia assured him. "Please, Porky, I'd like to move them over here, too!"

With a groan, Porky moved all the furniture to one end of the room.

"Isn't the pie done?" Porky sniffed the air hopefully.

"Not quite," Petunia said. "You know, I think you were right, Porky! I like things better the way they were. I don't like to ask you to move it again... but if you roll the carpet up, the furniture will slide on a bare floor with less work on your part."

Porky shot her an icy look, but he rolled the carpet to one end of the room and put the furniture back the way it was.

"Now, that's fine!" he said firmly.

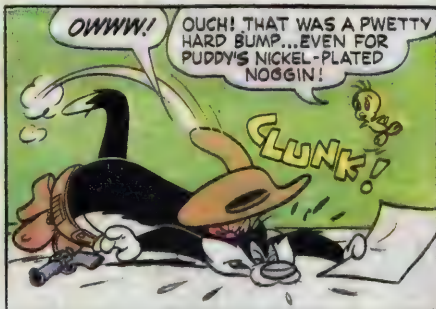

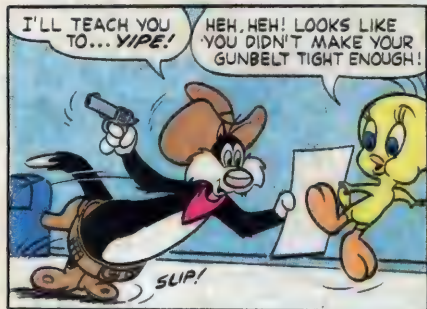

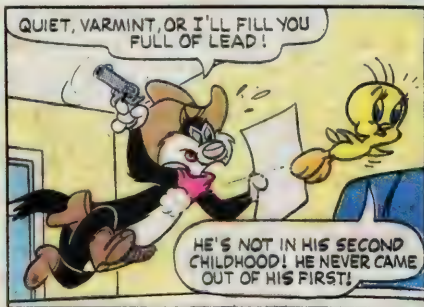

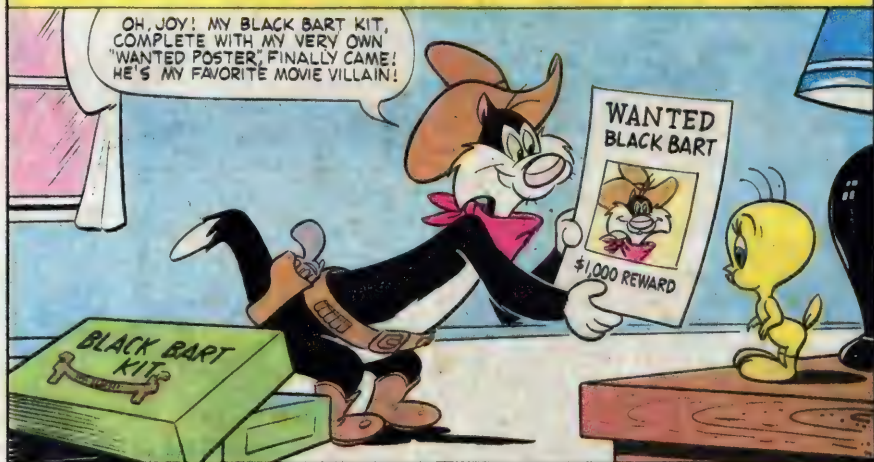

"It certainly is," Petunia agreed. "You are wonderful, Porky! Now, if you'll just put the carpet in the garage, I'll get the pie! It is done now!"

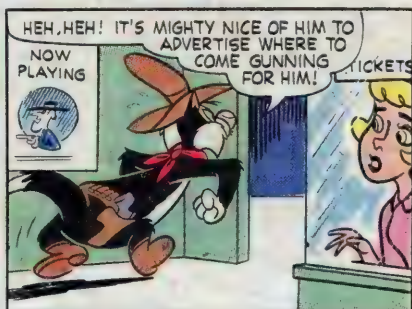

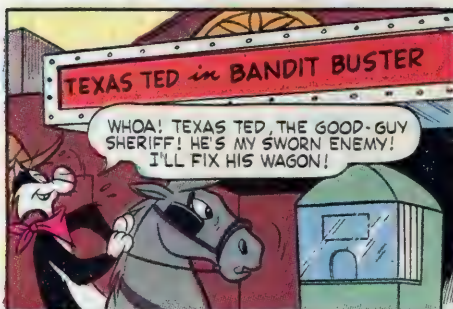

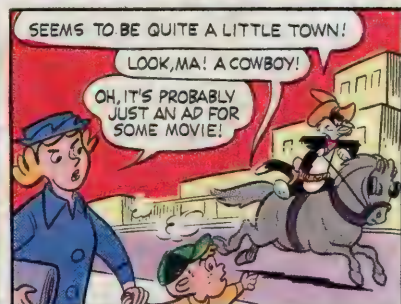

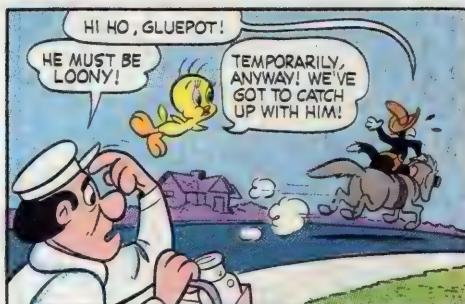

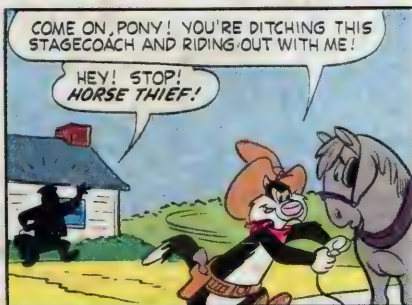

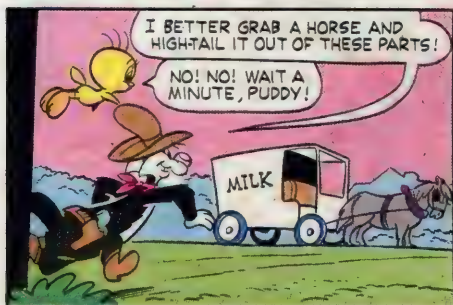

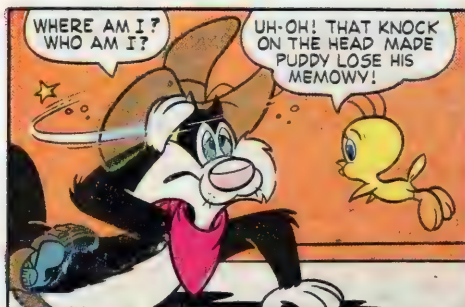

A little later, a very weary Porky staggered into the kitchen. On the table was a steaming apple pie.

"May I sit down, now?" he asked hopefully.

"Of course!" Petunia smiled. "Everything is in apple-pie order and the pie is yours!"
